The Regulation of International Commercial Arbitration

Arbitrators' Duties and the Emerging Arbitral Market

João Ilhão Moreira, University of Macau, China

This book addresses how the regulation of international commercial arbitrators takes place.

The book provides an overview of how and why the regulation of international commercial arbitrators diverged from that of other professions. It also argues that, despite these differences, there is an effective regulatory environment overseeing the behaviour of international commercial arbitrators.

No-Fault Approaches in the NHS

Raising Concerns and Raising Standards

Sonia Macleod, University of Oxford, UK & Christopher Hodges, University of Oxford, UK

This book explores how concerns can be raised about the NHS, why raising concerns hasn't always improved standards, and how a no-fault open culture approach could drive improvements.

It describes a wide range of mechanisms for raising concerns about the NHS including complaints, the ombudsman, litigation, HSIB, and the major inquiries since 2000, across the various UK jurisdictions.

The no-fault approaches proposed in the book provide long-term sustainable solutions to systemic problems, which are particularly timely given the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the NHS.

Delivering Justice

A Holistic and Multidisciplinary Approach

Edited by Xandra Kramer, Utrecht University, the Netherlands, Stefaan Voet, KU Leuven, Belgium, Lorenz Ködderitzsch, Johnson & Johnson, Belgium, Magdalena Tulibacka, Emory Law School Atlanta, Georgia, USA & Burkhard Hess, Max Planck Institute, Luxembourg

In this Liber Amicorum, leading experts and long-time friends come together to pay tribute to Christopher Hodges by exploring what can be done to deliver justice and fairness, focusing on collective redress, consumer dispute resolution, court system reform, ethical business regulation and regulatory delivery.

Throughout his academic career, Christopher Hodges worked on a variety of topics dealing with access to justice and dispute resolution.

Delivering justice, and "making things better", runs like a thread through his work; the same thread connects the chapters in this book.

Dispute Resolution and Conflict of Laws

Edited by Thomas Pfeiffer, Heidelberg University, Germany & Jan von Hein, University of Freiburg, Germany

This new commentary analyses article-by-article European conflict of law regulations. It looks specifically at: Rome I and Rome II; Brussels Ibis Regulation; Service Regulation; Taking of Evidence Regulation; Enforcement Order Regulation; and European Insolvency Regulation. It also offers the international perspective, exploring the New York Convention and UNCITRAL-ML. It focuses particularly on the revisions to the Brussels I Regulation and the European Insolvency Regulation, and on the relationship between conflict of laws rules and Member States' national law. Finally, it takes account of disputes before national courts. Authoritative, and rigorous, this is required reading for international private lawyers.

Asia-Pacific Trusts Law, Volume 2

Adaptation in Context

Edited by Ying Khai Liew, University of Melbourne, Australia & Ying-Chieh Wu, Seoul National University, Korea

In this book, leading legal scholars and practitioners from across the Asia-Pacific region probe the ways in which the trust structure has been adapted in order to meet specific needs of each jurisdiction.

This region-wide perspective shows how those jurisdictions have adapted the trust structure to meet a diverse set of needs, including social, religious, economic, commercial, or even historical needs. By making readers aware of the commonality of needs across the region, the book promotes coordination and cooperation in utilising trusts law to address shared concerns.

A Socio-Legal Theory of Money for the Digital Commercial Society

A New Analytical Framework to Understand Cryptoassets

Israel Cedillo Lazcano, Universidad de las Américas Puebla (UDLAP), Mexico

This book poses the question: do we need a new body of regulations and the constitution of new regulatory agents to face the evolution of money in the Fourth Industrial Revolution? It provides a multidisciplinary analysis that includes elements, such as the relevance of intellectual property rights, which are disregarded in the legal analysis of money. Furthermore, the book proposes the idea that traditional analyses on the exercise of the lex monetae ignore the role of inside monies and technological infrastructures developed and supported by the private sector, as exemplified in the evolution of the cryptoassets market and in cases such as Banco de Portugal v Waterlow & Sons.

2ND EDITION

Great Debates in Company Law

Lorraine Talbot, University of Birmingham, Birmingham & Andreas Kokkinis

A lively and highly valuable discussion regarding the key debates in modern UK company law. The central great debate, that of 'what is the company?' is at the heart of this book, which in turn raises questions over what the purpose of the company is and whose interests are paramount? Discussions around what we produce as a society and for whose benefit we produce are explored, along with the progression of global development, and how this impacts the environment, social cohesion and human rights.

2ND EDITION

Principles of the Law of Agency

Howard Bennett, University of Nottingham, UK

The 2nd edition of this successful book provides a fully updated, succinct examination of the principles of agency law.

The book explores the rules of attribution, the rights and obligations arising within the agency relationship, the impact of agency in the fields of contract and tort, and the termination of an agent's authority. Full consideration is given to the issues arising under the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations 1993. The discussion is informed by common law authority that nourishes the development of agency law principle, and also by international soft law instruments and the Restatement of the Law, Third: Agency.

Buyers' Remedies in International Sales Law

A Comparative Study

Reza Beheshti, University of Nottingham, UK

An authoritative, in-depth examination of remedies in international sales of manufactured goods, this book provides a detailed analysis of the remedies available to a commercial buyer.

The book concentrates on four prominent legal regimes, namely the UK sales law, the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods 1980 (CISG), the American Uniform Commercial Code (UCC), and the UNIDROIT Principles of International Commercial Contracts 2016 (UPICC).

Providing access to, and analysis of, cases and arbitral decisions from all over the world, the book scrutinises the strengths and weaknesses of buyers' remedies through comparative and normative examination.

The Action to Set Aside under Stock Corporation Law in the Context of Structural Measures Reform Needed?

Reform Needed?

Tino Sekera-Terplan, Kempter, Gierlinger und Partner

The action to set aside is considered a protective instrument for shareholders in case of structural measures carried out by German stock corporations. This shareholder right has fallen into disrepute since 2005. At that time, shareholders started to exercise this right excessively because of the introduction of the squeeze-out. In 2009, the legislator therefore limited the action's control function substantially. The question arises whether the right to file actions to set structural measures aside must undergo reform. This book explores the issue by studying legal problems connected with the right to challenge such measures, including by looking into practical cases.

The Foundations of Russian Law

Edited by Marianna Muravyeva, University of Helsinki, Finland

This accessible text explains how Russian law works in all its principal areas. It elucidates the main concepts and frameworks behind Russian law, and uses original legal sources and case law to explain how it operates in practice. The contributors, all of whom are leading experts on Russian law, employ original research to further knowledge of the Russian legal profession, legal culture, judiciary and court systems, providing a scholarly and practical account of Russian law for students and scholars alike. It is essential reading for anyone seeking a deeper understanding of the subject.

Dawn Raids Under Challenge

Due Process Aspects on the European Commission's Dawn Raid Practices

Helene Andersson, Counsel at Delphi, Sweden

This 2nd edition provides an updated analysis of the European Commission's dawn raid practices. Examining the obligations imposed by the Charter and the ECHR and the response of the Luxembourg and Strasbourg Courts, the book shows that whereas the Strasbourg Court strikes a balance between efficiency concerns and fundamental rights, the approach of the EU Courts is not equally balanced.

The book provides an essential examination of this important subject, and is of great practical interest to companies, practitioners, and enforcers. It is also of theoretical interest, offering reflections on the effectiveness and legitimacy of the Commission's enforcement powers.

Competition Law and Economic Inequality

Edited by Jan Broulík, University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands & Katalin Cseres, University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands

This book explores whether economic inequality, a major societal challenge of our time, can be addressed by the means of competition law.

The chapters investigate the relationship between competition law and economic (in)equality from philosophical, historical, and economic perspectives. They look at the conceptual foundations of competition law and doctrinal frameworks of individual jurisdictions, as well as specific problems and markets. As such, the book provides a novel and comprehensive overview of whether and how competition law can contribute to more equality in both developed and developing countries.

AI and the Rule of Law

The Necessary Evolution of a Concept

Paul Burgess, Monash University, Australia

This book considers the ways in which the concept of the rule of law will need to evolve in order to ensure that the exercise of power by Artificial Intelligence (AI) does not become arbitrary and does not proceed unchecked. It presents the rule of law and its impact on the past and the present; considers what AI is, what it does, and what it might become in future; and looks at how AI will need to be harnessed to allow power to be exercised more effectively in the future.

Contagion, Technology, and Law at the Limits

Edited by Lynette J Chua, National University of Singapore, Singapore & Jack Jin Gary Lee, The New School for Social Research, New York, USA

This open access book explores law, politics, and inequality in fights against infectious diseases.

Guided by a theoretical framework called "governing through contagion", the studies in this book analyse how past and present governments have tried to combat contagious diseases, such as the bubonic plague, cholera, HIV/AIDS, and COVID-19.

They examine how these governments used law and other technologies, including waste management, mask-wearing, quarantine stations, house inspections, and the burning of entire neighbourhoods, to achieve their aims of protecting populations and ensuring productivity.

Referendums as Representative Democracy

Leah Trueblood, University of Oxford, UK

In referendums on fundamental constitutional issues, do the people come together to make decisions instead of representatives? This book argues no. It offers an alternative theory of referendums whereby they are one of many ordinary ways that voters give direction to their representatives. In this way, the book argues that referendums are better understood as exercises in representative democracy.

Challenging the current treatment of referendums in processes of constitutional change both in the United Kingdom and around the world, the book strengthens the case for referendums by showing how they can support, rather than undermine, institutions of representative democracy.

Constitutionalising Europe

The Making of a European Constitutional Law

Monica Claes, University of Maastricht, the Netherlands

This book discusses the making of a constitutional law for Europe, consisting of constitutional rules and principles which are complemented by those of national constitutions.

It is further multi-layered, informed as it is by international frameworks such as the European Convention of Human Rights. The authors illustrate these connections and how they interrelate. They explore the various dynamics of this composite constitutional structure, uncovering the common heritage on which the European Union is built. The book also examines the rich diversity in constitutional traditions between its Member States, expertly untangling the constitutional complexity at the heart of the European Union.

Gender, Sexuality and Constitutionalism in Asia

Edited by Wen-Chen Chang, National Yang Ming Chiao Tung University, Taiwan, Kelley Loper, University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong, Mara Malagodi, University of Warwick, UK & Ruth Rubio-Marin, University of Sevilla, Spain

This book analyses the equal citizenship claims of women and sexual and gender diverse people across several Asian jurisdictions. Leading comparative constitutional law scholars identify 'opportunity structures' to explain the uneven advancement of gender equality through constitutional litigation and consider a combination of variables which shape the diverging trajectories of the jurisdictions in this study. The authors also embed the relevant constitutional and legal developments in their historical, political and social contexts.

The chapters cover East Asia (Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, and South Korea), South-East Asia (Malaysia, Singapore, Philippines, and Indonesia), and South Asia (India, Nepal, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka).

The Rule of Law in South Africa

Heinz Klug, University of Wisconsin, USA, Sanele Sibanda, University of Pretoria, South Africa & Sindiso Mnisi Weeks, University of Massachusetts Boston, USA

This book explores the contentious history of the rule of law in the geographic and socio-political space that becomes South Africa.

This is a history of contestation over the idea and use of indigenous, colonial, and constitutional law by official institutions. The book addresses the rule of law under colonialism and apartheid during the democratic transition and under South Africa's existing constitutional order. It also considers extra-legal influences on the rule of law and delves into the lived experience of the rule of law in a society where legal pluralism shapes the lives of large portions of the population.

The Form of Legislation and the Rule of Law

Ronan Cormacain, Consultant legislative counsel, UK

What does the rule of law mean, in practical terms, for the way that legislation is prepared, drafted and presented?

In this book, each element of the rule of law is analysed to establish principles about the form that legislation ought to take, and how each principle can be given concrete effect.

Much has been written about the nature and content of the rule of law, but relatively little has been devoted to legisprudence, the theory and practice of legislation. This book now draws these 2 subjects together in a detailed and innovative way.

Executive Power

The Prerogative, Past, Present and Future

Robert Hazell, University College London, UK & Timothy Foot, University College London, UK

The prerogative has long been a mystery to most observers; this book demystifies it. It explains each of the prerogative powers and clarifies the respective roles of government, Parliament and the courts in defining the extent of prerogative powers, and in regulating their use.

It covers the whole range of prerogative powers, from going to war and ratifying treaties, appointing and dismissing ministers, regulating the civil service and public appointments, to the grant of honours and pardons and the issue of passports. It provides a guide to the prerogative – past, present, and future – together with suggestions for reform.

The Constitution of Chile

A Contextual Analysis

Javier Couso, Universidad Diego Portales, Chile

This book provides a critical introduction to Chile's constitutional system, covering its key elements.

These include an account of its historical origins; the structure of the different branches of government; the way the fundamental rights are recognized and guaranteed; and the recent judicialization of politics experienced by the country. Furthermore, it addresses three crucial themes of Chile's constitutionalism: the early development of a constitutional state toward the mid-19th century, the irruption of a military dictatorship from 1973–1990, and the persistent lack of legitimacy of the Constitution of 1980.

Harmonizing Digital Contract Law

The Impact of EU Directives 2019/770 and 2019/771 and the Regulation of Online Platforms

Edited by Alberto De Franceschi, University of Ferrara, Italy & Reiner Schulze, University of Münster, Germany

This book assesses the impact of the implementation of EU Directives 2019/770 (DCD) and 2019/771 (SGD) in the EU Member States. Each contribution explores the systematic implications (e.g. the relationship with the law of obligations and contracts, intellectual property law and data protection law), to the influence on the formation of concepts and terms in the national law. The author of each country report investigates the use of the options which the EU legislator left in the discretion of national legislators (e.g. Art. 12 SGD). Finally, the book explores any voluntary extended implementation of the contents of the directives.

Marie Tidball, University of Oxford, UK

This book considers the governance of defendants and offenders with autism in the UK courts.

Drawing on a rigorously-researched case study of adult defendants with autism, the book brings together legal and policy literature, criminological and criminal justice theory with disability studies to provide insight into the 'dividing practices' that affect the governance of disabled defendants' conduct.

Using interviews with elites and practitioners, and court observation of 8 adult defendants with autism, the book investigates why the status of defendants with autism as disabled under the Equality Act 2010 has been overlooked in criminal justice policy and criminal court decision-making.

Vicarious Liability in the Common Law World

Edited by Paula Giliker, University of Bristol, UK

Vicarious liability is one of the more controversial areas of tort law, and has been debated by the highest courts in the common law world. This comparative work, by exploring how the key common law jurisdictions treat the question of vicarious liability, provides an expertly drawn landscape of the subject and its key doctrines. Jurisdictions covered include, the United Kingdom, Australia and the United States. Its critical analysis will ensure it is essential reading for all scholars of tort law. Its engagement with the judicial approach, means that all practitioners in the field will find it compelling.

Criminal Law Reform Now, Volume 2

Proposals and Critique

Edited by Melissa Bone, University of Leicester, UK, J J Child, University of Birmingham, UK & Jonathan Rogers, University of Cambridge, UK

Returning for a 2nd volume, this book highlights and explores the current reform debates that matter most to legal experts, with each chapter making a case for positive change.

Each chapter presents legal reform proposals, with topics ranging across criminal law, criminal justice, and evidence – including corporate liability, consent to bodily harms, prostitution, legal context and domestic abuse, drugs, economic crimes, defendant anonymity, appeal court structures, and the procedures of the Criminal Cases Review Commission.

Each chapter is followed by a comment from a different author, providing an additional expert view on each reform proposal.

Modern Criminal Law

Essays in Honour of GR Sullivan

Edited by A P Simester, National University of Singapore

This book brings together leading scholars from the next generation of UK criminal lawyers to celebrate the work of G R (Bob) Sullivan, Emeritus Professor at University College London, in the year of his retirement from writing Simester and Sullivan's Criminal Law: Theory and Doctrine. The contributors examine areas in which Professor Sullivan's own writing has been influential, ranging from general doctrines such as causation and culpability, across specific offences like theft and fraud, through defences including necessity and insanity; before turning, finally, to matters affecting the criminal process, notably challenges to the doctrine of precedent in criminal law.

Re-Reading Beccaria

On the Contemporary Significance of a Penal Classic

Edited by Antje du Bois-Pedain, University of Cambridge, UK & Shachar Eldar, Ono Academic College, Israel

This book considers the way that Cesare Beccaria's slim 1764 volume On Crimes and Punishments influenced policy developments worldwide and decades, if not centuries, after its publication.

For those who turn to Beccaria's work today, the encounter is shaped by that knowledge. Appreciative of his book's dual nature as historical document and repository of ideas, the contributors address different aspects of the criminal justice theory Beccaria offered his readers and explore methodological questions raised by meeting a historical text of this kind – unsystematic and by modern standards often under-argued – with modern scholarly conventions in mind.

The Criminal Law's Person

Edited by Claes Lernestedt, Stockholm University & Matt Matravers, University of York

Encounters between criminal-law scholars and those working in 'explanatory' and 'behavioural' sciences have often been characterised by mutual distrust and defensiveness. To break this deadlock, a new framing of the issues is needed. This is not simply a matter of asking, for example, what follows for criminal responsibility from the latest scientific findings in neuroscience. Rather, what is needed is to re-examine the fundamental idea of the criminal law's person so as to construct a more nuanced understanding of criminal law's blameworthy individual. That is the goal of this volume which brings together an international group of academics from across the fields of law, philosophy, and ethics.

Young People, Risk, and Social Justice in a Transitional Society

The Case of Northern Ireland

Clare Dwyer, Queen's University Belfast, Northern Ireland, Brendan Browne, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland & Peter Shirlow, University of Liverpool, UK

This book provides a theoretical and empirical examination of the ongoing risks impacting the lives of children and young people in the 'new' Northern Ireland.

It examines the problems inherent to the most vulnerable and socially marginalised young people in Northern Irish society. The book frames the experience of young people growing up in Northern Ireland within the risk discourse, and locates debates on transitional societies within the broader issues of marginalisation, poverty, criminalisation, stigmatisation and the need for deeper societal engagement. It examines the social, legal and organisational responses to the risks young people encounter in a post-conflict society.

Mass Shootings in America

Understanding the Debates, Causes, and Responses

Edited by Jaclyn Schildkraut, State University of New York at Oswego, USA

An authoritative and probing work that examines mass shooting events in the United States from 1966 to 2016. In addition to providing vital information about each shooting, this book carefully considers and articulates the reasons for and consequences of mass shootings in America, drawing on the perspectives of experts in the fields of criminal justice, sociology, and psychology. The work also includes a collection of illuminating and historically important primary documents pertaining to mass shooting events and the broader problem of gun violence in American society.

Krämer's EU Environmental Law

Ludwig Krämer, University College London, UK & Christopher Badger, 6 Pump Court, UK

The new edition of this essential book details the present state of EU environmental law as it has developed over the last 50 years. The author was personally involved in its making and enforcement, having worked for more than 30 years in the environmental department of the European Commission. The book provides therefore unique insights into this complex field. New chapters elaborate on the relationship between UK and EU law after Brexit (written by Christopher Badger) and on the global effect of EU environmental law and policy.

The book is indispensable reading for students, researchers, and practising lawyers alike.

Climate Change, Cattle, and the International Legal Order

Rebecca Williams, University of Glasgow, UK

Livestock food systems need to be rapidly rethought to tackle the global climate crisis. This book examines how climate concerns for the livestock sector are governed in international law and addresses the sector's inclusion or (lack thereof) across the international governance of climate change, agriculture, forests and trade.

The book is a key text for all those with an interest in the legal governance of climate change and agriculture, adding to the timely debate of the future sustainability on the global diet and the relationship between affluence and climate change.

The Legal Recognition of Animal Sentience

Principles, Approaches and Applications

Edited by Jane Kotzmann, Deakin University, Australia & M B Rodriguez Ferrere, University of Otago, New Zealand

This book explores the movement towards the recognition of animal sentience in the law. It explores some first principles underpinning the recognition of animal sentience, including the nature and scope of sentience provisions, the connection between sentience and empathy, drafting issues, and the relationship between sentience recognition and animal rights. The book highlights the operation of animal sentience provisions in several jurisdictions throughout the world and considers sector-specific applications and limitations of animal sentience recognition.

Criminal Law and Labour Exploitation

Annalisa Lucifora, Universidad Autónoma de Madrid, Spain

Taking the definitions contained in international law as its starting point, this book is an investigation of the fine lines between labour exploitation, the trafficking of human beings and other phenomena such as forced labour and slavery, focusing on Italy, France, Spain and the UK. An analysis of the supranational framework concludes with an examination of the jurisprudence produced by the Court of Strasbourg in article 4 of the ECHR, legislation to which the theory of positive obligations elaborated by the Court was soon extended.

Data Protection, Migration and Border Control

The GDPR, the Law Enforcement Directive and Beyond

Teresa Quintel, Maastricht European Centre on Privacy and Cybersecurity, the Netherlands

This book assesses data protection rules that are applicable to the processing of personal data in a law enforcement context. It offers the first extensive analysis of the LED and Regulation (EU) 2018/1725. It illustrates the challenges arising from the unclear delineation between the different data protection instruments on both the national and EU levels. Taking a practical approach, it exemplifies situations where the application of data protection instruments could give rise to risk faced by national enforcement agencies. The scope of processing data by law enforcement, border control, migration management and asylum, give this book broad appeal.

EU Diplomacy in Multilateral Fora

Edited by Christine Kaddous, University of Geneva, Switzerland

This magisterial volume draws on the expertise of leading scholars, practitioners and policy makers to chart the EU's participation in six key international organisations. The organisations examined are: the UN; the WTO; the ILO; the WHO; the ITU and the FAO. Each are explored from a unique dual perspective: firstly from that of the EU, and secondly from that of the organisation itself. This collection offers a truly innovative approach to ensure a better understanding of the EU role's as a global diplomatic power.

EU Trade and Investment Treaty-Making Post-Lisbon

*Moving Beyond Mixity
 Gesa Kübek, Groningen University, the Netherlands*

A thorough legal analysis of the practice of mixity since the Lisbon Treaty, providing the perspectives of international, EU, and national law.

The book presents a detailed understanding of mixity, the common commercial policy, and the recent case law of the EU Court of Justice. It assesses recent practice and current challenges, such as the non-ratification of mixed agreements, Brexit, ensuring parliamentary participation in EU treaty-making, and the new architecture for concluding EU trade and investment agreements. The author argues that in the field of trade and investment, mixity is no longer a purely procedural question but a substantive choice.

Free Movement and Welfare Access in the European Union

*Re-Balancing Conflicting Interests in Citizenship Jurisprudence
 Victoria Hooton, Max Planck Institute for Legal History and Legal Theory, Germany*

This book assesses EU free movement law and its balancing of fundamental EU objectives and its Member States' concerns regarding their welfare systems. It takes a dual approach: a combination of doctrinal analysis of EU citizenship case law and mobility data. This clearly shows an imbalance between the representation and protection of these conflicting interests in EU case law. The study goes on to identify avenues for reform and to highlight the importance of the principle of proportionality for attaining a legitimate balance of interests. This will be much welcomed by scholars of EU free movement and citizenship law.

The Structural Transformation of European Private Law

*A Critique of Juridical Hermeneutics
 Leone Niglia, University of Exeter, UK*

This book offers a ground-breaking read, both comparative and historical, of the structure and transformation of private law in continental Europe. It reconstructs a hermeneutical praxis that is (it is argued) at the core of private law: the balancing of conflicting interests and normative considerations in 3 key arguments:

- 'balancing' in private law is not merely an analytical process but instead a form of legal argument
- in order to truly understand private law, a bottom-up historical analysis must be adopted
- 'balancing' has always been a comparative process within civil law systems and across the civil-common law divide.

Private Autonomy in EU Internal Market Law

*Parameters of its Protection and Limitation
 Rufat Babayev, Leicester University, UK*

This important study offers a fresh perspective on the normative framework of the internal market.

The book explores the place of the principle of private (economic) autonomy in the European internal market. Looking at the coexistence of, and interaction between, varying manifestations of private autonomy, it offers the first truly comprehensive review of the protection of private autonomy at the normative core of the internal market.

Lastly, it introduces a new framework to apply to those still unresolved areas within the internal market normative framework such as free movement rights and the Charter of Fundamental Rights.

Free Movement Rights for Atypical Workers

Alice Welsh, York Law School, UK

This book challenges the existing focus in EU citizenship scholarship which looks only at the economically active. Arguing that the deliberately vague EU concept of 'work' allows for its restricted application in Member States, it shows how many workers and economic contributors are left out of the free movement regime. Relying on both qualitative case studies and legal analysis of both EU and UK legislation, case law, and decision maker guidance, it argues that, if EU free movement rights are awarded on the basis of market credentials, more must be done to ensure a contemporary, accurate and inclusive market citizenship.

The European Convention on Human Rights and Private Law

Comparative Perspectives from South-Eastern Europe

Edited by Mateja Durovic, City University of Hong Kong & Cristina Poncibò, University of Turin, Italy

A team of expert contributors address challenging issues concerning the relationship between private law and the rule of law and human rights, with specific focus on case studies from South-Eastern Europe.

The book examines the broadening application of human rights to the private law fields and the resulting effects. Contributors offer a truly interdisciplinary perspective drawn from comparative law, civil law, procedural law and public law. By so doing, they offer insights into the questions the region poses for private law and human rights.

Judicial Authority in EU Internal Market Law

Implications for the Balance of Competences and Powers

Vilija Velyvyte, University of Reading, UK

This book examines the role of the European Court of Justice in the regulation of the internal market from a competence perspective. It analyses EU free movement case law in light of the constitutional principles that govern the allocation of competences and powers in the EU: conferral, subsidiarity and proportionality, on the vertical level, and institutional balance, on the horizontal level, arguing that the Court's observance of the four principles has been inconsistent, thereby creating substantive and constitutional tensions in the EU's relationship with the Member States and upsetting the institutional balance of powers between EU legislature and judiciary.

The European Court of Justice and its Critics

Edited by Anthony Arnull, University of Birmingham, UK & Takis Tridimas, King's College London, UK

There is no doubt that the European Court of Justice has had a transformative effect on EU Law, but not without controversy. This book explores these criticisms, asking if concerns over judicial activism, unconventional interpretative methods, conflicts with national courts and over-reach are justified. Drawing on the expertise of leading commentators in their sectors, its ambitious scope explores the question from across the spectrum of EU Law. Its analysis includes the political dimension, giving the fullest understanding of the environment in which the Court and its judgments have operated. An insightful, thought-provoking study of one of the world's most important courts.

Exporting the European Convention on Human Rights

Maria-Louiza Deftou, National and Kapodistrian University of Athens, Greece

The ECHR's impact is considerable, nationally and supranationally. To what degree has that influence seen its norms, doctrines and methods of interpretation being exported into other human rights systems? This book answers that question by exploring the judicial dialogue of the ECHR system with comparable legal orders. It takes a horizontal study of regional and global systems to identify the impact of the ECHR within the confines of their jurisprudence. It analyses the legal consequences of the extension of these norms and what it means for the functioning of international human rights law. A compelling study for European and international human rights scholars.

The Changing European Union

A Critical View on the Role of Law and the Courts

Edited by Tamara Capeta, University of Zagreb, Croatia, Iris Goldner Lang, University of Zagreb, Croatia & Tamara Perišin, University of Zagreb, Croatia

This collection explores how the EU judicial wing is responding to new challenges currently being faced by the block. It looks at globally shared problems such as unequal societies, the rise of populism, and the migrant crisis. It also examines internal EU issues such as Brexit, the differences between the centre and peripheries, and the division of competences. It is recognised that the international order is transforming and the old norms no longer apply. Taking a multifaceted approach, this book draws on voices from academia and the judiciary to suggest how the EU might respond effectively to the challenges faced.

The European Court of Justice as a Context-Conscious Lawmaker

Urška Šadl, European University Institute, Italy

Courts are context-conscious. They solve legal disputes with societal impact in mind, using interpretive tools and procedural means. This book develops concepts and methods for a systematic and legally informative analysis of this complex process. The evidence delivered prompts a conversation about the authority courts have to change the law. The analysis focuses on the European Court of Justice and its free movement case law. The framework and theory, however, are relevant to courts and case law everywhere. This is a compelling and intriguing examination of the ECJ and its shaping of a key tenet of EU law.

EU Regulations in Practice

Legislative and Judicial Approaches

Edited by Adam Lazowski, University of Westminster, UK & Alicja Sikora, Jagiellonian University, Poland

This book provides a thorough assessment of EU regulations. It also looks at their application in all twenty-seven Member States and some neighbouring countries. EU regulations are perceived as the most effective sources of EU secondary legislation. Part 1 examines these points, providing the analytical backdrop to the remaining chapters. In Parts 2 and 3 the focus moves to the reception of regulations in Member States and selected neighbouring jurisdictions. Written by leading practitioners and academics, the book offers a conceptual underpinning to the European Union's regulatory law-making, as well as a practical exploration of their impact and application.

The Italian Influence on European Law

Judges and Advocates General (1952-2000)

Edited by Daniele Gallo, LUISS University, Rome, Roberto Mastroianni, Naples "Federico II", Italy, Fernanda G. Nicola, Washington College of Law, USA & Lorenzo Cecchitti, University of Bologna, Italy

Drawing on expertise from across the worlds of the judiciary, the bar, and legal academia, this book provides insights into the role of a key member state and how it informs the wider Union's development.

This collection examines the judicial biographies of Italian judges and advocates general during almost five decades of the European Union. It explores the national ties of judges and AGs to their Member States, to better understand the continuous relationship between judges and their Member States' governments and how they practice the principle of judicial independence, a central pillar of the ECJ's rule of law jurisprudence.

Conflict and Transformation

Essays on European Law and Policy

Christian Joerges, Hertie School of Governance, Berlin

In this important compendium, one of the leading scholars of EU law reflects on his previous writings in the context of current challenges facing the EU.

The author offers a welcome counterbalance to what some see over optimism when assessing the development of EU. In so doing, he identifies three flaws in the current European ideology. Firstly, he points to the intellectual weakness of the 'integration through law' ideology. Secondly, he sets out the systematic neglect of 'the economic'. Finally, the author addresses the complacency with respect to Europe's darker legacies. This is a critical and candid assessment of Europe.

The Foundations of European Transnational Private Law

Edited by Anna Beckers, Maastricht University, the Netherlands, Hans-W Micklitz, European University Institute, Italy, Rodrigo Vallejo, University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands & Pia Letto-Vanamo, University of Helsinki, Finland

This collection identifies and assesses the role of EU private law, beyond the EU marketplace, but within the transnational market. It explores the implications the external reach of EU private law is having at both a substantive and normative level. Its team of experts do this by relating the external dimension of European regulatory private law to two discussion points: its concrete contribution of different sectors of transnational markets; and its relevance to contemporary legal conceptions of transnational law and ordering. This allows the book to set out the role of European private law in the global political economy.

Shaping EU Law the British Way

UK Advocates General at the Court of Justice of the European Union

Edited by Graham Butler, University of Southern Denmark & Adam Lazowski, University of Westminster, UK

Filling the lacunae of research into the role of Advocates General at the Court of Justice of the EU, this title offers an in-depth analysis of the way in which the UK Advocates General contributed to development of EU law during 47 years of the UK's membership of the EU in over forty cases at the Court of Justice.

With the last UK Advocate General departing from the Court of Justice in September 2020, this forms an apt retrospective and critical analysis at the end of an important era. It also includes reflections from retired Advocate Generals.

Article 47 of the EU Charter and Effective Judicial Protection, Volume 1

The Court of Justice's Perspective

Edited by Matteo Bonelli, Maastricht University, the Netherlands, Mariolina Eliantonio, Maastricht University, the Netherlands & Giulia Gentile, LSE Law School, UK

This ambitious project explores whether the provision for judicial protection contained in article 47 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights is effective. The first volume examines how the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU) has interpreted art 47, reflecting on its impact on the EU's constitutional structure. Taking both a horizontal interpretation (analysing constitutional themes in play) and a vertical one (looking at specific policy areas) it shows the interplay of the protection within the wider EU architecture. Addressing key questions such as legal certainty, judicial autonomy and competences, it enhances understanding of judicial protection in the EU.

The Future of European Private Law

Edited by André Janssen, Radboud University, Nijmegen, Netherlands, Matthias Lehmann, University of Vienna, Austria & Reiner Schulze, University of Münster, Germany

This book provides a critical assessment of European private law, to suggest how it might develop in the future.

It reflects on how its recent expansive period, heralding an ambitious future including a European Civil Code, came to an abrupt end. It suggests that development can still happen, albeit in a fragmented way and on a smaller scale. This is an insightful and ultimately hopeful analysis of what might lie ahead.

Data Governance Act

Article-by-Article Commentary

Edited by Louisa Specht, Friedrich-Wilhelms-Universität Bonn, Germany & Moritz Hennemann, University of Passau, Germany

The Data Governance Act (DGA) allows for increased access to data. Specifically it harmonises the conditions for the re-use of public sector data which is subject to certain third-party rights, it establishes a framework for private data sharing services that allows users impart personal data, and it introduces a framework for data sharing for altruistic purposes. This commentary provides an expert guide to the Act, giving an authoritative and rigorous overview of its reach and scope.

Murder, Medicine and Motherhood

The Wrongful Convictions of Kathleen Folbigg

Emma Cunliffe, University of British Columbia, Canada

The 2nd edition of Murder, Medicine and Motherhood presents a fresh examination of the case of Kathleen Folbigg and a critical evaluation of the process that led to her exoneration in 2023.

This new edition extends the examination of the legal process, medical evidence, and normative expectations of motherhood. It evaluates law's fact-finding processes and the legal system's adherence to the principles of proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and raises concerns about how legal actors work with scientific uncertainty and assess women's credibility and demeanor.

Evidence, Respect and Truth

Knowledge and Justice in Legal Trials

Liat Levanon, King's College London, UK

Can we rely solely on statistics when we judge what is true and just? This book takes a holistic approach to addressing this question. It takes the legal trial as its paradigmatic case study before considering a wider range of cases, including profiling, the use of algorithms to predict students' grades, and the authorisation of automated cars. The book suggests that when we make judgements about the truth or about justice, approximations are not good enough. Truth and justice are uncompromising; they must be so, because the value that underlies them both is respect; and respect takes no compromise.

Litigants in Person and the Family Justice System

Jessica Mant, Monash University, Australia

This book explores the experiences of people trying to navigate the family justice system. It calls for a refocusing of the debate about the historical challenges faced by Litigants in Person as well as the next steps for the family justice system. Drawing together decades of research on self-representation in family law for the first time and including interviews with Litigants in Person after LASPO, it uses an innovative socio-legal framework of theoretical approaches to explore the journeys taken by litigations representing themselves.

The Complexity of Human Rights

From Vernacularization to Quantification

Edited by Philip Alston, New York University School of Law, USA

This landmark publication is the first to assess the foundational contribution of Sally Engle Merry from the human rights law perspective.

The 'vernacularization' of rights; ie a language open to translation and interpretation, the ground-breaking approach of legal anthropologist Sally Engle Merry, transformed human rights debates. Here the leading voices in the field assess this approach and show how it is relied on when analysing rights data, under the stewardship of one of the most renowned lawyers of his generation.

The Proportionality Test in European Patent Law

Patent Injunctions Before EU Courts and the UPC

Léon Dijkman, Rotterdam University, the Netherlands

Does a European patent always entitle its holder to a permanent injunction? This open access book presents a detailed, practical, and comprehensive test to determine when injunctive relief should be limited on proportionality grounds.

The book guides readers from proportionality's normative foundations to its practical applications; it is an invaluable resource for practitioners, clerks, and scholars looking not only for the normative, empirical, and legal basis of proportionality in European patent law, but also for guidance on its real-world operation.

Minority Recognition and the Diversity Deficit

Comparative Perspectives

Edited by Jessika Eichler, Max Planck Institute, Germany & Kyriaki Topidi, European Centre for Minority Issues, Germany

This book addresses how forms of minority recognition can be articulated in the law, institutions, and contemporary societal contexts. It explores minority rights through critical engagement with the law and its categorisations. Furthermore, it looks at collective recognition through distinct rights, including participation and free speech as well as the challenges within related conflicts of rights. It addresses intersectional forms of discrimination, revealing the complexities of societal exclusion. Looking at empirical findings in Europe and Latin America, the book draws theoretical conclusions and new frameworks of recognition. A fascinating study on a key question engaging human rights and discrimination law.

Commentary on the Digital Services Act

Edited by Benjamin Raue, Digital Law Institute of Trier, Germany & Franz Hofmann, Friedrich-Alexander-Universität, Germany

The Digital Services Act provides a framework for all categories of content, products, services and activities on intermediary services. It builds on existing liability rules and is directly applicable to all intermediary services provided to residents of the European Union, irrespective of the place of establishment of the service provider. In this commentary, a team of experts work meticulously, article-by-article, to set out precisely the obligations and liabilities that it gives rise to. All lawyers in the field of digital services will find this invaluable.

Labour Law and Economic Policy

How Employment Rights Improve the Economy

Adrián Todolí-Signes, University of Valencia, Spain

This book changes the narrative of why we need labour standards. It studies labour institutions from an economic perspective to justify their existence and the advantages that they bring to innovation, efficiency, and economic growth.

Using case studies from across the EU, the UK, and the US, the book shows how the deregulation of labour markets harms innovation and the economy. It demonstrates that labour standards such as the minimum wage, sectoral collective bargaining and collective rights, protection against dismissal and discrimination, occupational risk prevention, and social security are necessary for the economy to function properly.

Edited by Sebastian Lohsse, University of Münster, Germany, Reiner Schulze, University of Münster, Germany & Dirk Staudenmayer, University of Münster, Germany

This seventh volume provides an in-depth analyses of the issues raised by the European Parliament resolution of 20 October 2020, calling for an EU "Regulation on Liability for the Operation of Artificial Intelligence Systems." These have now been followed up by the legislative proposals for an AI Liability Directive and a revised Product Liability Directive, published by the European Commission on September 28, 2022. These proposed new legal acts, which may lead to a significant reshaping of liability law at the European and national level, were discussed at the colloquium as the first expert event on this subject.

Valuing Employment Rights

A Study of Remedies in Employment Law
ACL Davies, University of Oxford, UK

This book analyses a neglected topic: remedies for breaches of employment rights. It argues that some of the remedies set out in statute or at common law are a poor 'fit' for the employment rights they are supposed to protect. Moreover, the remedies on offer do not always suggest a sensible ranking of employment rights. The book suggests why some of these problems might have arisen and makes proposals for reform.

Ranging across theory and doctrine, and analysing criminal, contract, tort, and statutory employment law, this book will be of interest to academics seeking a deeper understanding of the subject.

Decent Work in the Digital Age

European and Comparative Perspectives

Edited by Tamás Gyulavári, Pázmány Péter Catholic University, Hungary & Emanuele Menegatti, University of Bologna, Italy

This book explores the legal and practical implications of the digital age for employment and industrial relations. It analyses the negative effects on working conditions in fields such as platform work, robotisation, discrimination, data protection, and freedom of speech. It also looks at how to ensure decent working conditions for workers affected by digitalisation, by investigating the minimum standards that should be secured to mitigate negative effects – and how these could be guaranteed by legislation and collective bargaining.

The book is an important reference for academics and researchers, social partners, and policy makers with an interest in labour law.

Migrant Labour and the Reshaping of Employment Law

Edited by Bernard Ryan & Rebecca Zahn

This book explores the challenges posed by contemporary labour migration for employment law regimes in highly developed countries. The authors of individual chapters are leading scholars of employment law, in the United Kingdom, other European countries, Australia and Canada. One theme in the work is the effects of migration levels and patterns upon general employment law. Other chapters are concerned with the equality for migrant workers, avenues for the redress of exploitation, and the position in employment law of migrant workers without a right to work.

Lawyers and the Rule of Law

Andrew Boon, City, University of London, UK

This book examines lawyers' historical and contemporary relationship to the rule of law. It does so by identifying a range of rule of law issues confronting society; by illustrating how lawyers interact with them; by examining how legal independent professions' support is key to rule of law; and finally by exploring arguments that satisfactory support for the rule of law is available by other means.

It considers lawyers' contribution to the growth of constitutionalism, the formulation of roles and identities, the formation of values, and the challenges faced by lawyers and the rule of law in the past 50 years.

Landmark Cases in Labour Law

Edited by Jeremias Adams-Prassl, University of Oxford, UK, Alan Bogg, University of Bristol, UK & ACL Davies, University of Oxford, UK

This book features essays by leading legal scholars on 'landmark' labour law cases from the mid-19th century to the present day. The essays are acutely sensitive to the historical and theoretical context of each case, and the volume provides original and sometimes startling new perspectives on some familiar friends.

The book traces the development of labour law through the social struggles and economic conflicts between workers, trade unions, and employers. It also charts the remarkable transformation of the constitutional role of courts in labour law, from instruments of class oppression to the vindication of workers' fundamental rights at work.

This book uses examples, case studies, and commentary from practitioners to reveal the many and varied strategies American and English lawyers use to protect truth. It shows how they tackle their conflicting duties, and highlights the 'tragic choices' lawyers everywhere routinely make through their 'power of decision'.

The book presents a unique and fascinating account of what happens when lawyers' duties to clients conflict with their duties to the legal system, and looks in detail at the ethical codes and laws that regulate their conduct.

Alexander Gillespie, University of Waikato, New Zealand

This is the fourth volume of a projected five-volume series charting the causes of war from 3000 BCE to the present day, written by a leading international lawyer, and using as its principal materials the documentary history of international law, largely in the form of treaties and the negotiations which led up to them. In departing from the various theories put forward by historians, anthropologists and psychologists, Gillespie offers a different taxonomy of the causes of war, focusing on the broader settings of politics, religion, migrations and empire-building.

The Legal History of the Church of England

From the Reformation to the Present

Edited by Norman Doe, Cardiff University, UK & Stephen Coleman, Cardiff University, UK

This book provides the first comprehensive analysis of the principal legal landmarks in the evolution of the law of the established Church of England since the Reformation to the present day.

It explores the foundations of this body of law – the ecclesiastical law – and considers its crucial role in the development of the Church of England over the centuries.

Each chapter studies a broadly 50 year period, evaluating the significance of the legal landmarks for the development of church law, and its place in wider English society.

Kelsen's Global Legacy

Essays on the Legal and Political Philosophy

Edited by Jorge Emilio Núñez, Manchester Metropolitan University, UK, Gonzalo Villa Rosas, Externado University, Colombia & Jorge Luis Fabra Zamora, State University of New York, USA

This unique volume brings together leading legal academics and researchers from different legal traditions to discuss the work and impact of Hans Kelsen, the most influential legal philosopher with global reach. Using his Pure Theory of Law and his theory of democracy as a lingua franca, the book allows for dialogues between jurisdictions and legal traditions and serves as a point of departure for further research on several themes such as state, international, and non-state law.

Human Rights After Deleuze

Towards an An-archic Jurisprudence

Christos Marneros, University of Lincoln, UK

This book examines the possibility of creating new ways of existing beyond human rights. The multiple socio-political crises and the dominance of neoliberal and capitalist policies have led legal and political theorists to question the emancipatory promise of human rights and to reconceptualise human rights in theory and practice. The possibility of creating new ways of existing beyond human rights has been left significantly under examined, until now.

Litigants in Person in the Civil Justice System

Kate Leader, Queen Mary, University of London, UK

Why do people represent themselves? What works and what doesn't work for self-represented parties? And how can we improve Litigant in Person (LiP) experiences to make the civil justice system fairer?

Based on in-depth interviews with individuals who have acted as Litigants in Person in the civil courts, this book provides a deep account of LiP experiences that help to show how much we don't know about LiPs, the civil justice system and LiPs' place within it, as well as the kinds of things we ought to be doing to improve access to justice for unrepresented parties.

Subalterns and International Law

A Political Critique

Remi Bachand, University of Quebec, Canada

This book provides a theoretical analysis of international law's impact on relations between dominant and subordinate groups.

It charts the law's role in the reproduction, legitimation, and transformation of systems such as capitalism, racism, and imperialism. It looks at 4 distinct moments: when law structures society; when rules and institutions are formally used; when law influences ideological positions; and when law is used to defend political claims.

The book shows the law as a powerful tool for promoting the reproduction and legitimation of subordination. Offering a fresh perspective, it will appeal to scholars of international law and international relations.

Gendered Peace

Christine Chinkin, London School of Economics and Political Science, UK & Louise Arimatsu

This open access book sets out what gendered peace can look like and how it might impact on international law, drawing on personal reflections, expert essays and empirical research. History, law, international relations and gender studies all merge to support the authors' suggested model for how peace should be considered going forward in international law.

Australia in the International Legal System

From Empire to the Contemporary World

Edited by Madelaine Chiam, La Trobe Law School, Australia & Alison Duxbury, University of Melbourne, Australia

What impact has Australia had on international law?

This collection of essays delves into the history of Australia's interactions with international law and considers how its people have shaped it. It explores issues such as the country's imperial and settler past. It assesses how Australians have contributed to institutions such as the ICJ, the UN and the British Commonwealth. It gives a fascinating insight into international law's impact on a domestic legal system and the complex and multifaceted nature of that relationship.

Studies in International Law

A Framework for Compliance in International Humanitarian Law

Elizabeth Stubbins Bates, Oxford Brookes University, UK

This book grapples with the long recognised challenge of international humanitarian law: namely that it is only partially implemented and under-enforced. It shows how the duty to respect and disseminate international humanitarian law in military instruction and training, command responsibility to prevent, grave breaches, and the law on superior orders are all inter-related. Interdisciplinary analysis gives insights into key actors' behaviour. All this serves to show what is required under international humanitarian law and how it can be better complied with. This innovative study will be welcomed by academics in the field, but also by military lawyers and NGOs.

Marine Bioprospecting, Biodiversity and Novel Uses of Ocean Resources

New Approaches in International Law

Edited by Niels Krabbe, University of Gothenburg, Sweden & David Langlet, University of Uppsala, Sweden

This open access book explores how developments in marine biodiversity and other resources challenge the foundations of the law of the sea and its domestic implementation. It does this by examining different perspectives and case studies. The contributors also examine international environmental law, intellectual property rights, and contract law. The team of experts broaden the scholarly debate on marine genetic resources and provide a timely reflection on ongoing policy developments.

Global Lawmaking and Social Change

Gregor Novak, Oxford Reports on International Law in Domestic Courts, UK

This book explores the operation, role, and prospects of global lawmaking, and the implications of the design of customary international lawmaking on social change. Drawing on insights from various disciplines and historical contexts, it provides an explanatory and analytical framework for the question. It goes further, however, by critiquing conventional accounts of international lawmaking and developing an alternative framework centered on the four types of customary international law. It brings a fresh and unique approach; drawing on jurisprudential, legal history, and social scientific perspectives, which will be welcomed by all scholars in the field.

Judicial Decisions in International Law Argumentation

Between Entrapment and Creativity

Letizia Lo Giacco, Leiden University, the Netherlands

Do the decisions of courts transform international law? This book explores this question by looking at the issues of international criminal law. It focuses on cases in four key fields: protected groups in the definition of genocide; armed conflict in the definition of war crimes and serious violations of the laws and customs of war; command responsibility; and the 'unlawful combatant'. Cases are drawn from courts including the International Military Tribunal in Nuremberg (IMT), the ICTY, the ICTR, and the ICC. This work offers an innovative way of considering the transformative effect of courts on international law.

Quasi-Judicial Bodies in International Law

Edouard Fromageau, Max Planck Institute, Luxembourg

What are quasi-judicial bodies as a formulation in international law? Though these are currently legion at the international level, there is yet to be a rigorous analysis of them as a category.

This book fills this gap by setting out a comprehensive map of this quasi-judicial terrain. Taking a comparative approach, it looks at the form and function of these bodies, as well as commenting on their effectiveness. It goes further to explore their understanding at the domestic and international court level.

Faith in Courts

Human Rights Advocacy and the Transnational Regulation of Religion

Lisa Harms, University of Münster, Germany

The phenomenon of judicialisation in the field of freedom of religion is long recognised. But, to date, little has been written on how advocacy and strategic litigation has actively changed the field. This important book does just that. It shows how Jehovah's Witnesses, Muslims, Sikhs, Evangelicals, Christian conservatives and Russian Orthodox actors have negotiated the right to freedom of religion at the ECtHR over the past 30 years.

Thai Private International Law

Akawat Laowonsiri, Thammasat University, Thailand

This book is the leading reference on Thai private international law in English. The chapters apply a combination of common and civil law analytical perspectives and cover the whole of Thai private international law including commercial matters, family law, succession, electronic commerce, intellectual property, competition (antitrust), and environmental disputes.

In addition to covering the traditional conflict of law areas of jurisdiction, applicable law (choice of law) and enforcement, the chapters also look into conflict of laws questions arising in arbitration and assess Thailand's involvement in the harmonisation of private international law globally and regionally within ASEAN.

Parental Child Abduction to Islamic Law Countries

A Child Rights Analysis of the Legal Framework

Nazia Yaqub, Leeds Beckett University, UK

This book looks at the sensitive and complex question of child abduction, with a unique child rights perspective. Taking Islamic law as its case study, it delves into child abduction in key jurisdictions from Iran to Saudi Arabia and Libya to Pakistan. Rigorous doctrinal analysis is enhanced by empirical insights, namely interviews with abductees, parents and professionals. It is an excellent guide to a complicated field.

The Application of Foreign Law in the British and German Courts

Alexander DJ Critchley, University of Edinburgh, UK

This book explores the application of foreign law in civil proceedings in the British and German courts. It focuses on how domestic procedural law impacts on the application of choice of law rules in domestic courts. The work comparatively engages with the questions of procedure, determination and investigation as they affect the law in England and Wales, Scotland, and Germany. Although the relevant jurisdictions are the focus, the comparative analysis extends to explore examples from other jurisdictions, including relevant international and European conventions.
