Vernacular Architecture

Critical and Primary Sources

Edited by Howard Davis, University of Oregon, USA

Collating scholarly historical texts from the last 200 years from a wide range of sources, this four-volume set offers a key knowledge resource for the field. An essential addition to libraries, it creates for the first time a comprehensive framework through which to understand the critical aspects and diverse interpretations of vernacular architecture studies, vital to much ongoing research in the built environment, in heritage studies, and material culture studies.

2ND EDITION

Encyclopedia of Vernacular Architecture of the World

Edited by Marcel Vellinga, Oxford Brookes University, UK

The Encyclopedia of Vernacular Architecture of the World presents, in six volumes, 2 million words, and 3,000 illustrated entries, the definitive resource for the study of the world's vernacular and traditional building cultures.

Increasing from three volumes to six, this new edition, expanded and updated throughout, presents over 30 percent new material. A major development in the field of vernacular architecture studies, this new edition reflects the considerable growth in research in the field since the first edition, and its expanded scope captures two decades of concerted effort to document and understand the world's fast-disappearing traditional and vernacular building cultures.

DIGITAL RESOURCES

The Arden Encyclopedia of Shakespeare's Language

Edited by Jonathan Culpeper, Lancaster University, UK, Andrew Hardie, Lancaster University, UK and Jane Demmen, Linguist

These two-volumes bring scholarship on Shakespeare's language into the 21st-century. They offer the first comprehensive account of Shakespeare's language to use computational methods derived from corpus linguistics.

Taking a dictionary format, Volume 1 covers A-M, Volume 2 N-Z. Each focuses on the use and meanings of Shakespeare's most-commonly used words, both in the context of what he wrote and in the context in which he wrote. Internal comparisons reveal how Shakespeare's language varies dynamically across his works, while external comparisons - including with a 380-million word corpus of wider English genres - show the stylistic flavour of words.

A Cultural History of Democracy

Edited by Eugenio Biagini, University of Cambridge, UK

How has the concept of democracy been understood, manifested, reimagined and represented through the ages? In a work that spans 2,500 years these fundamental questions are addressed by 66 experts, each contributing their overview of a theme applied to a period in history. With the help of a broad range of case material they illustrate the physical, social and cultural contexts of democracy in Western culture from antiquity to the present.

Themes (and chapter titles) are: Sovereignty; Liberty and the Rule of Law; The 'Common Good'; Economic and Social Democracy; Religion and the Principles of Political Obligation; Citizenship and Gender; Ethnicity, Race and Nationalism; Democratic Crises, Revolutions and Civil Resistance; International Relations; and Beyond the Polis.

Europe's Welfare Traditions Since 1500

Reform Without End

Thomas McStay Adams

This two-volume study traces the interwoven traditions of modern welfare states in Europe over five centuries, from Portugal, France, and Italy to Britain, Belgium, and Germany. It shows that the provision of assistance to those in need has faced recognizably similar challenges from the 16th century through to the present: how to allocate aid equitably (and how to allow for social status); how to give support without undermining autonomy (the work activation dilemma); and how to balance private and public spheres of action and responsibility.

A Global History of Crime and Punishment

Volumes 1-6

Edited by Clive Emsley, Open University, UK and Sara McDougall, CUNY, USA

What constituted a crime 2,500 years ago, and how was criminal activity dealt with? How has our definition of justice evolved over time alongside developments in law, society, religion and class structures? 36 experts address these pressing questions in a six-volume reference set that spans 2,500 years of human history.

Integrating perspectives from history, cultural studies, philosophy and classics, this globally-focused work traces developments in the ever-changing criminal and justice worlds against a variety of social, legal and cultural contexts.

The Making of Modern Atlantic Monarchies

1770 to the Present Day

Edited by Carolina Armenteros, Pontificia Universidad Católica Madre y Maestra, Dominican Republic, Matthijs Lok, University of Amsterdam, Netherlands and Iason Zarikos, EKKE Centre for Social Research, Greece

This two-volume study sees contributors from the UK, the USA, Canada, Mexico, Singapore and ten countries from across mainland Europe analyse how monarchy has been theorized and implemented in the Atlantic world from the birth of conservatism during the French Revolution to the present day.

Using monarchy as a lens, it also provides an original exploration of how conservatism, often branded as reactive, can be viewed as a continual response to, and reinterpretation of, pivotal social and political events over the longue durée. 33 chapters are included covering over 20 nations across the Atlantic world as well as parts of Asia.

The Bible and Literature

Edited by Stephen Prickett, Duke University, USA and Elisabeth Jay, Oxford Brookes University, UK

1.5 million word resource in five-volumes that provides researchers with an authoritative resource on the impact and influence of the bible upon the development of literature, charting this relationship from the classical period to the modern day.

Each volume is edited by a leading specialist in the period, and begins with a set of introductory materials including a chapter on how the biblical text is mediated in the given period. Ten thematic essays then introduce the key thinkers, works, events and themes of the period. Extracts from primary materials are then presented with specialist commentary showing how these texts interact with the bible itself.

The five volumes cover: The Late Classical and Medieval Periods, The Renaissance and Reformation Periods, Enlightenment to Romanticism, The Victorian Period, and The Modern Period
